INTERIM DIVIDEND FOR H1 2025:

UBA, Fidelity, Okomu Lead Possibility of Increasing Dividend Payout

- Zenith, GTCO, Presco to Surprise the Market
- Access Promises Steady Growth in Dividend Payout

Wole Olajide (ACS)

alf Year results of quoted companies on the floor of the Nigerian Exchange will obviously start rolling in this new week as we are approaching the end of July which is the deadline for filing Q2 2025 report. Except for Companies that would declare interim dividends, their Audited report might come in around August or latest by September.

A few companies have been consistent in paying interim dividends to investors year on year. Smart investors have already started taking position ahead in order to take advantage of interim dividend. Companies that are likely to pay interim dividend this year include: Access, Zenith Bank, GTCO, UBA, Fidelity Bank, Stanbic IBTC, Presco, Okomu, UCAP, Africa Prudential, Nestle and Seplat.

The regulatory forbearance clause by the Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN) to Banks which could hinder them from paying dividend has been sorted out. Moreso, the affected banks have assured investors that they will not stop paying dividend as most have them would have exited the CBN forbearance window by 30th June 2025. At that, it's very certain to expect interim dividends from these financial institutions.

UNITED BANK FOR AFRICA (UBA)

United Bank for Africa (UBA) surprised the market in H1 2024 when it declared N2 as interim dividend from the previous payout of 50 kobo the previous year. This represents 300% increase in dividend payout. There could be another surprise this year.

Interim dividend history of UBA since 2022 shows geometric growth in the Company's dividend payout. In H1 2022, UBA declared 20 kobo interim dividend. By the following year (H1 2023), interim dividend has increased by 150% to 50 kobo. The Bank eventually increased it by 300% to N2 in H1 2024.

Following the growth trajectory of interim dividend payout by UBA, interim dividend expectation for H1 2025 cannot be less than N2.00. As a matter of fact, there's a possibility they might increase it.

FIDELITY BANK

Fidelity Bank increased their H1 2024 interim dividend by 240% to 85 kobo from 25 kobo. There is possibility for another surprise in H₁ 2025.

July 21 - 27, 2025 www.stocksng.com

Interim dividend history of Fidelity Bank is indeed a geometric progression. From 10 kobo interim dividend in H1 2022, the bank grew dividend payout by 150% to 25 kobo in H1 2023. Dividend payout in H1 2024 grew by 240% to 85 kobo in H1 2024. There is possibility that Fidelity will pay N1.00 as interim dividend or retain the previous dividend of 85 kobo.

ZENITH BANK

Zenith Bank over the years has been consistent in paying interim dividends to shareholders.

Looking at their interim dividend history for the past 3 years, there have been consistent growth in their dividend payout.

In Half Year 2022, Zenith Bank declared 30 kobo interim dividend. By Half year 2023, the Bank grew the interim dividend by 66.67% to 50 kobo. Half year 2024 interim dividend was increased to N1.00 from 50 kobo, which translates to 100% increase. Following the growth trajectory of the interim dividend payout of Zenith Bank, there's a possibility that the bank might increase the interim dividend to N1.50. Worst case scenario, Zenith will pay N1.00.

Guaranty Trust Holding Company Plc (GTCO) share the same interim dividend history with Zenith Bank.

In Half Year 2022, GTCO

declared 30 kobo interim dividend. By Half year 2023, the GTCO increased their interim dividend to 50 kobo from 30 kobo, up by 66.67%. Half year 2024 interim dividend grew by 100% to N1.00 from 50 kobo. There is possibility that GTCO might increase their dividend pay out to N1.50 or retain the previous payout of N1.00.

ACCESS HOLDINGS

Access Holdings has been consistent with payment of interim dividend year on year. The growth in interim dividend payout has been moderate. In H1 2022, Access paid 20 kobo interim dividend. By the following year (H1 2023), dividend payout increased by 50% to 30 kobo. By the following year (H1 2024) interim dividend the company declared 45 kobo interim dividend, up by 50%. There is possibility that Access Holdings might increase its interim dividend 60 kobo.

STANBIC IBTC HOLDINGS

Stanbic IBTC Holdings has consistently made investors smile to the bank with good interim dividend payout.

The Financial Institution paid N1.50 as interim dividend in H1 2022. They paid same amount in H1 2023. In H1 2024, dividend payout increased by 33.33% to N2.00 from N1.50.

There's a possibility that Stanbic IBTC would retain interim dividend payout of N2.00 for H1 2025.

Okomu Oil Palm has been consistent with payment of interim dividend over the years.

The Company in H1 2022 declared N9 as interim dividend. By the following year (H1 2023), dividend payout declined by 50% to N4.5. In H1 2024, dividend payout grew to N10, which is a growth of 122% from N4.5 declared the previous year.

There's a possibility that Okomu will increase its dividend payout for H1 2025. Better still, Okomu could retain the payout of N10.

PRESCO

Presco consistently paid N2 as interim dividend in H1 2022 and H1 2023. However, in H1 2024, the Company did not declare interim dividend. They however compensated investors in FY 2024 with a whopping N42 final dividend.

There's a possibility that Presco would declare interim dividend for H1 2025.

SEPLAT

Seplat pays dividend in US dollars at CBN official rate. The Company has been consistent in dividend payment, both interim and final.

Seplat paid interim dividend of 3 cents in both in H1 2023 H1 2024 respectively. At the official CBN rate of N1,533.11 per dollar, interim dividend of 3 cents is equivalent to N45.99.

Seplat is likely to declare interim dividend of 3 cents in H₁ 2025.

UCAP

United Capital Plc (UCAP), the only listed stockbroking firm on NGX made a debut declaration of 90 kobo interim dividend in H1 2024. There is every possibility that the Company will continue with this gesture of exciting investors. The financial institution might retain 90 kobo interim dividend for H1 2025.

AFRICA PRUDENTIAL

Africa Prudential Plc also made a debut interim dividend declaration of 15 kobo in H1 2024. AFRIPRUD as fondly called is the only listed Registrar on NGX. We expect AFRFIPUD to continue payment of interim dividend. They are likely to still pay 15 kobo interim dividend In H1 2025.

CUSTODIAN INVESTMENTS

Custodian Investment in the past 3 years has consistently paid interim dividend to shareholders.

In H1 2022, the Company paid 10 kobo interim dividend to shareholders. By the second year (H1 2023) dividend payout increased to 15 kobo, up by 50%. In H1 2024, the Company maintained 15 kobo dividend payout. We expect Custodian to still pay 15 kobo interim dividend in H1 2025.

NESTLE

The last time Nestle paid interim dividend was in H1 2022 when the Company declared N25 as interim dividend. Since then, Nestle has not declared any dividend, either final or interim since 2023.

The chances are very slim that Nestle will declare interim dividend, but we hope there could be final dividend at the end of the year 2025.

Electricity Act Amendment Bill 2025:

How Impactful Will This Be on Businesses

he recent passage of the Electricity Act Amendment Bill 2025 by the Senate marks a pivotal moment for Nigeria's energy sector in our quest for a more robust and more reliable power sector, It's really a big deal. This legislation aims to overhaul the existing framework governing electricity generation, distribution, and consumption in the country.

Senator Abaribe, who heads the Senate Committee on Power, really laid it out there about the state of Nigeria's electricity industry. And, honestly, it's pretty alarming. The Federal Government has racked up a staggering debt of over? 4 trillion in this sector. That's a big number, and it definitely raises eyebrows. Then there's the issue of electricity distribution companies. Some of them aren't even paving for the power they're receiving. That's just adding fuel to the fire of instability in the sector. It's frustrating and makes you wonder what's going on behind the scenes.

This legislation which proposes a series of reforms that could reshape the future of electricity in the country is expected to have far-reaching effect for businesses across the country and it's worth taking a closer look at what this means, particularly for the business sector.

First off, one of the standout features of this bill is the criminalization of vandalism against electricity infrastructure. Let's be honest, this is long overdue. Vandalism has been a persistent issue, we all know how destructive vandalism is, undermining the very foundation of our electricity supply, will not only disrupt power supply, but also set back effort to improve our electricity system. By making such acts a criminal offense with clearer penalties, the government sends a clear message, enough is enough, this kind of behaviour will no longer be tolerated.

There's hope for a more accountable system, businesses which rely heavily on stable power supply, can breathe a little easier knowing that there will be stricter consequences for those who disrupt service.

Next, we have the clarification regarding the transfer of regulatory power from the Nigerian Electricity Regulatory Commission (NERC) to state governments. This shift could streamline decision-making and make regulations more relevant to local contexts. For businesses, this means potentially quicker responses to power issues and more tailored solutions that consider regional needs. However, it's crucial that state governments are up to the task, we wouldn't want to see more bureaucracy in a system that desperately needs agility.

The enhancement of the Electricity Consumer Assistance Fund is another significant step forward. We can all agree that's it's not been all sunshine and rainbows transitioning to privatized electricity sector, the movement to band A and B has led to increased tariff and price hike, this is putting strains on small and growing businesses.

This fund is designed to support consumers, the vulnerable players in the economy, particularly those who struggle with electricity bills. For businesses, especially small and medium enterprises, this could mean better access to financial support during tough times. If we are being honest, with the high cost of living these days, many Nigerians are feeling the pinch. It's about creating a safety net that helps keep operations running smoothly, ease some of the burden and honestly, that can make a world of difference in a challenging economic climate.

Abaribe's call for removing ambiguities in the law is spot on, electricity is something we all rely on, It's essential. So, when strikes happen, it feels like the country is being held hostage and business owners feel the impact the most on their operations.

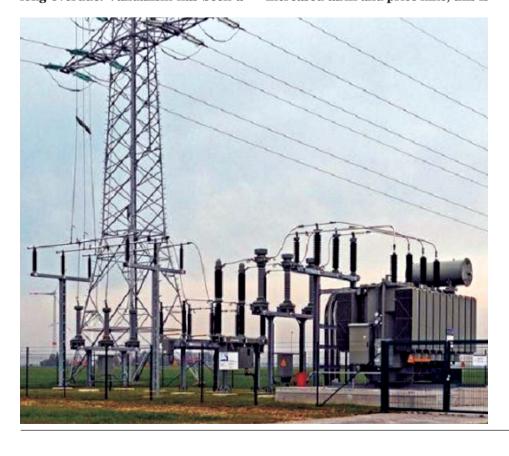

Lastly, the bill aims to strengthen penalties and institutional oversight. Increased oversight means that there will be fewer loopholes for corruption and mismanagement, which, let's face it, have plagued the sector for years.

For businesses, a more robust regulatory framework could lead to a more reliable electricity supply, which is essential for growth and innovation.

So, how will all of this impact businesses in Nigeria? In short, there's potential for a more stable and reliable electricity supply, which is crucial for any enterprise, I dare say a lifeline for businesses. As the infrastructure improves and regulations become clearer, companies might find themselves in a better position to invest, expand, and innovate, not having to deal with constant power outage will not only boost growth and productivity, it will be be a game changer.

Reliable electricity will drastically reduce operational costs. Think about it, companies have been relying on costly generators, buying of petrol and diesel which not only eat into profits but also create an unstable work environment. With a more dependable power grid, businesses could redirect those savings into growth initiatives, employee training, or even expanding their services. Which can lead more jobs, it's a ripple effect honestly.

However, it's essential to remain cautious. Implementation will be key. It's one thing to pass a bill, it's another to actually see it make a difference on ground, to see it translate to real benefits for businesses and citizens alike. If the reforms are not executed effectively, we might find ourselves back where we started. But with the right commitment from both the government and the private sector, the Electricity Act Amendment Bill 2025 could indeed light up a brighter future for Nigerian businesses. After all, a thriving business environment is key to the nation's overall economic health. Let's keep our fingers crossed!

Profit Taking on NGX, Sector Rotation Could Trigger Short-Term Volatility - Gilbert

The Nigerian stock market last week closed on a bullish note with 4.31% growth. Year to date, the market has returned 27.84% with the All Share Index and Market capitalization at N131,585.66 points and N83.241 trillion respectively. In a stock market review with Gilbert Ayoola, a seasoned capital market analyst, the following were discussed:

- Excerpts:

Ruth Ibikunle

he stock market last week closed on a positive note with 4.31% growth. What is the outlook for the new week?

The Nigerian equities market closed last week on a strong bullish note, climbing 4.31%—it's the best weekly performance in several months. This was powered by upbeat economic indicators, robust corporate earnings, and inflation easing to 22.22%, all of which boosted investor sentiment and attracted broad-based buying across key sectors.

Looking into the new trading week, momentum appears poised to continue, supported by positive macro tailwinds and bullish investor sentiment. However, investors should be mindful of possible mid-week profit-taking and sector rotation that could trigger short-term volatility. A constructive but selective approach is advised: focus on quality stocks, maintain a risk-managed stance, and keep an eye on evolving macroeconomic signals. Overall, the outlook remains favorable, especially for financials, industrials, and consumer goods.

• What is driving the current bull in the market?

The bullish sentiment is fueled by a combination of strong earnings and resilient economic data. Improved optimism around consumer confidence and broad sector participation, which is further propelled by market gains.

• What is driving the growth in BUA Cement, Nestle, Stanbic, and Dangote Cement?

In line with rising investors' confidence and a bullish market tone, stocks like BUA Cement, Nestlé, Stanbic-IBTC, and Dangote Cement are gaining strong momentum.

BUA Cement -- The growth is driven by robust revenue and volume expansion, supported by strategic pricing and increased production capacity. Coupled with high trading volume and technical

"strong-buy" signals attracting momentum-led investors.

Nestlé Nigeria -- Strong Q1 earnings jumped 61% to N294.9 billion, with gross profit soaring 144%, driven by solid consumer demand and improved cost efficiency with renewed investor optimism. EPS forecast indicates 60% CAGR, high ROE (~34%), and a fresh 52-week high reflect strong confidence in earnings growth.

Stanbic IBTC -- The soiled position signaled broad-based financial performance, institutional backing, and a successful rights issue fueling share price appreciation. Subsequently, the year-to-date gain of +71%, led by a 17% rise in July, on the back of strong fundamentals backed by corporate investment banking and asset management performance sequel to robust institutional support and a successful N148? billion rights issue all signaling investor confidence.

Dangote Cement -- The interest is based on strong earnings growth, export expansion, and operational scale underpinning investor confidence. The Q1 2025 revenue surged +21.7% (N995billion), with EBITDA up 49%, due to strategic pricing and volume expansion. These fundamentals reflect solid business model and sector resilience, reinforcing the current bullish sentiment.

• How attractive is Access Holdings at N26.85?

Access Holdings at N26.85 offers a compelling value proposition. It trades at a discount to peers on a P/E basis despite strong earnings, rising asset base, and digital banking expansion. Consistent dividend payments add to its appeal in a vield-conscious environment. With market sentiment bullish, Access presents an attractive entry for medium to long-term investors.

• Is Nigerian Breweries a good buy at N74?

Nigerian Breweries at N74 appears cautiously attractive. The stock benefited from brand strength and market leadership, but rising input costs and FX pressures have continued to weigh on margins. While valuation seems fair amid recovery prospects, near-term upside depends on improved earnings visibility. It is suitable for long-term investors seeking value in a recovering consumer sector.

• NBS recently published that Nigeria's inflation rate has dropped to 22.22%. What is the significance of this to the economy? How will this impact the stock

Nigeria's headline inflation dropped to 22.22% in June, marking the third consecutive monthly decline and the lowest level since April 2023. This signals a potential shift in the inflation cycle, down from nearly 35% a year ago, driven by subsidy reforms, forex stabilisation, and improved food

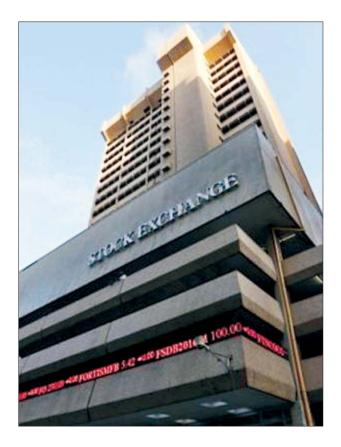

The sustained decline offers relief to consumers, restores purchasing power, and supports domestic demand. It also reflects greater macro stability, lowering import costs and easing pressure on households.

For the stock market, this creates a benign backdrop: easing cost pressures, rising consumer purchasing power, and a more stable macro outlook set the stage for further gains—especially with the market in a bullish posture.

While enhancing investor confidence. A continued downtrend opens room for monetary easing, boosting credit flow and market liquidity. Sectors like consumer goods, financials, and industrials stand to benefit most.

What are the stocks to watch?

As we enter into the week, these are likely stocks to watch: MTN, Zenith. Seplat, Nestlé, Fidelity, BUA Foods, Transcorp, Access, CWG, Presco, NSLTECH, GTCO, and many others.

The Four Stages of Competence

unarguably the greatest point guard in the entire history of the NBA. Just name the shooting record and I am certain he holds it having broken it multiple times in the past.

tephen Curry! He is

I stumbled on a video of a training session of the NBA team, Golden Tate Warriors. The video showed the routine of Stephen Curry as he practiced 3-point shots. I didn't realise when my jaw hit the floor. If there is one man that has perfected his craft, it would be Stephen Curry. He made the shot time and time again from a variety of angles and a myriad of positions on the court. It was almost as if the man could not miss.

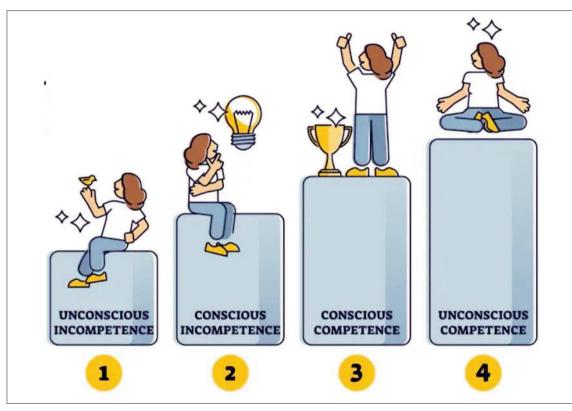

The amazing thing for me was seeing how effortless it all was. He did not pause to think of how to position his feet or how to hold the ball right. He just did his business at the subconscious level and it was a hit, back to back.

Watching this video brought back a memory that I had long locked away in a vault, hopefully never to be remembered. It was a sunny afternoon in Anthony Village, Lagos and I cannot exactly remember how I ended up on a basketball court in a compound on Abiodun Fasakin Crescent.

I am not exactly sure why but one of the players passed the ball to me. Maybe I looked like a distant cousin of Michael Jordan or maybe I had a confident look on my face which suggested I knew what I was doing. Anyway, the ball was with me and I didn't want to disappoint my ancestors. I remembered all the basketball videos I had watched, how the players positioned their feet and hands. I felt I could make the basket. I knew I could make the basket.

I let the ball fly, and boy, did it fly! It flew over the rim, over the back board and straight into the next compound. Everyone looked at me like I was from another planet. Apparently, the neighbouring landlord loathes the noise from the court and never gives back any ball that unfortunately adventure into his domain. I ruined the game and their day. In contrast to Stephen Curry's confidence that was backed by years of practice, my confidence was misplaced.

Being competent means having the requisite or adequate ability or qualities. One is said to be competent when they have the capacity to function or develop in a particular way. Competence is a spectrum that ranges from being grossly incompetent, like I was at basketball, to having god-like skills like Stephen Curry.

Let's run through the various stages in the quest for mastery.

U N C O N S C I O U S INCOMPETENCE

This is the lowest rung of the ladder and the most dangerous phase. Here, the subject knows nothing about a skill or a task but does not realise the depth of their ignorance. The unconsciously incompetent person may approach the task confidently having watched a few self-help videos or read a few books. They may have attended a seminar or two and feel they know enough about a task to accomplish it. In my basketball fiasco, I was the poster boy for unconscious incompetence. Being at this stage is dangerous as the misplaced confidence makes the subject take unnecessary risks which exaggerates the potential for loss. Often, this loss proceeds from being a potential to being material. Many retail investors think they have cracked the code for investing. Having made a lucky profit here and there, they hold their shoulders high while having their heads stuck in cloud nine. They fail to realise that him whom the gods of investing want to destroy, they allow to make a profit in their first few trades.

C O N S C I O U S INCOMPETENCE

This stage in the journey to competence begins when the subject realises that there is so much they do not know. The gods of investing have done their worst. Losses have been suffered and lessons have been painfully learnt. Just like when a balloon hits a sharp pin, the once high but unfounded confidence disappears in an instant.

There are 2 natural responses that may occur at the end of unconscious incompetence. The first is for the subject to crawl into their shell and give up. Unfortunately, the journey to mastery/competence ends here if this path is followed. Fortunately for me, my ego, posterity and the NBA, I never touched a basketball after my ordeal. The second likely option is that the person develops a determination to fill the now identified knowledge gap. The subject embarks on a quest for indepth knowledge. This is how learning begins.

CONSCIOUS COMPETENCE

After gradually amassing a knowledge base and building a thorough understanding of the skill or subject matter, wise decisions can now be made consciously. In this stage the person on the path to mastery will still need cues such as checklists/ routines which ensures that the accumulated knowledge and understood facts are taken into consideration each time a decision is to be made.

A retail investor at this stage will be best friends with an Excel spreadsheet and a financial model. There is no shame in referring to a set of rules you follow or some checklist you adhere to. Being reliant on your discounted cashflow model is a badge you must collect on the way to mastery. Wear it proudly. The highlight of this stage is practice. There are no shortcuts here. Malcolm Gladwell in his seminal book "Outliers: The story of success" described this stage as the 10,000 hours of practice that is needed to master any skill or task. You just must put in the hard work. Due to the knowledge base and constant practice, a person in this stage has built some competence as they would be inherently better at it than someone who is stuck in the stages discussed earlier. We must however realise that the holy grail is in the next stage.

U N C O N S C I O U S COMPETNECE

Here, the person has had many years of experience/ practice based on the foundation of a proven knowledge base and good understanding of the skill. They have had so much practice that it comes to them naturally. They do not need to consciously run through a checklist or remind themselves to follow the process. They just perform the skill seemingly effortlessly. This is mastery!

Remember Stephen Curry sinking all those 3-point shots from all angles and positions one can imagine? That's unconscious competence. For every single shot he sinks, he must have thrown similar shots in practice or in a real game, tens of thousands of times. His muscles now know how much of tension to generate for each movement, his feet automatically know how to position at each centimetre of the court and his hands just know how much force with which to throw the ball to make the basket from anywhere on the pitch without him needing to consciously think about it.

Charlie Munger, a prototype of an unconsciously competent investor, once said about Warren Buffett, "Warren often talks about these discounted cash flows, but I've never seen him do one. If it isn't perfectly obvious that its going to work out well if you do the calculation, then he tends to go on to the next idea". This is pattern recognition, which is a hall mark of mastery, at its best. Warren has only been practicing investing for the past 80 years.

In the past week, I saw a quote by Niccolo Machiavelli – "A sign of intelligence is an awareness of one's own ignorance". Where are you at present in the spectrum discussed above? In your day job, how are you faring? Do you feign competence but deep in your mind, you know you are far from it? If this is true for you, congratulations! You have now joined the ranks of the intelligent. Filling that gap is now your responsibility to yourself.

In investing, are you willing to put in the 10,000 hours of reading and practice to be able to hold your own? If you aren't, I recommend you strongly consider buying an Index fund, an Exchange Traded Fund or a Mutual Fund managed by professionals as this would only require the discipline of consistency from you rather than the skill of investing while earning you average market returns at the least.

Speaking in anticipation of the event, Executive Chairman of FIRS, Zacch Adedeji, said the clinic is part of broader efforts to entrench transparency, accountability, and inclusion within the tax system.

"The clinic reflects our commitment to promoting a culture of voluntary compliance by bringing tax education closer to the people. It is a critical step in strengthening trust, transparency, and inclusion in the tax system," Adedeji stated.

He stressed the need to expand the country's tax base while empowering citizens and business owners to fulfil their civic duties. "This clinic is more than an event; it's a movement to ensure every Nigerian understands their role in nation-building through voluntary tax compliance," he added.

The two-day event, which is being organised by the FIRS Emerging Taxpayers' Group (ETG), will include panel talks, interactive service desks, expert-led courses, and live Q&A forums covering subjects like business registration, tax filing, and dispute resolution.

Attendees will also engage directly with representatives from key institutions, including the Lagos State Internal Revenue Service (LIRS), Joint Tax Board (JTB), Corporate Affairs Commission (CAC), Tax Appeal Tribunal (TAT), National Identity Management Commission (NIMC), and Nigerian Investment Promotion Commission

Professional organisations anticipated to attend include the Chartered Institute of Taxation of Nigeria (CITN), the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Nigeria (ICAN), the Association of National Accountants of Nigeria (ANAN), the Nigerian Bar Association (NBA), and the Nigerian Medical Association (NMA).

Beyond tax advisory support, the NMA will offer free basic medical screenings during the event.

The first 300 physical attendees to register will receive branded gifts.

Open to business owners, the selfemployed, trade groups, and professionals, the Tax Clinic will also be livestreamed to enable virtual participation.

With the theme "Tax Clinic for Tax Clarity," the programme will be held on July 15 and 16, 2025 in Lagos.

The FIRS described the initiative as central to its strategy for increasing revenue generation, integrating the informal economy, and streamlining Nigeria's tax framework in line with the nation's broader economic development agenda.

Nigeria's Inflation Rate Drops to 22.22%

ata from the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) showed that Nigeria's headline inflation eased for the third consecutive month to 22.22% YoY in June 2025 from 22.97% in May. This deceleration occurred despite renewed upward momentum in both the food and core components. Food inflation rose for the first time post-rebasing, accelerating to 21.97% YoY from 21.14% in May, driven by higher prices of key staples such as pepper, tomatoes, meat, and plantain flour.

Meanwhile, core inflation reversed its earlier downward trend, climbing to 22.76% YoY from 22.28% in the previous month, reflecting increased cost pressures in transportation, information & communication, and insurance & financial Services.

On a monthly basis, inflationary pressures intensified across all major categories. Morocco's Wafa Assurance Launches Takeover Bid for Egypt's Delta Insurance oroccan insurer Wafa Assurance (BVC:WAA) has launched a public acquisition offer (PAO) for a majority stake in Egypt-based Delta Insurance (EGX:DEIN), according to a statement issued on Monday, June 16. The move targets Egypt's significant growth potential, with insurance penetration estimated at just 1% in the country of over 120 million people, where Wafa already operates via a life insurance subsidiary.

The PAO, filed on June 10 with Egypt's Financial Regulatory Authority (FRA), seeks to acquire at least 51% of Delta Insurance shares listed on the Cairo Stock Exchange. The offer is set at EGP40 ($2.52) per share, valuing the company at EGP5 billion ($317 million).

Egypt Kuwait Holding Company (EKH), Delta's largest shareholder with a 63.39% stake, has committed to selling its entire holding. The proposed acquisition remains contingent on approvals from regulatory authorities in both Egypt and Morocco.

Since 2018, Delta Insurance—majority-owned by EKH, an investment firm backed by Egyptian and Kuwaiti investors-has provided insurance and reinsurance products in both life and non-life segments.

Wafa Assurance, which entered Egypt's life insurance market in 2021 through its subsidiary Wafa Life Insurance Egypt, aims to expand its presence in the country through this deal. The Moroccan group outbid French insurer AXA in its effort to secure the acquisition.

Tips for a Happy Retirement

etirement marks a significant transition in life, offering a new-found freedom that can be both exciting and daunting.

While finances are important in retirement, maintaining your wellbeing is equally crucial to fully enjoy this new chapter in your life. To retire well, a combination of

To retire well, a combination of financial planning, health management, and social engagement is crucial. This includes creating a detailed retirement budget, maximizing retirement savings, and maintaining an active lifestyle with social connections.

Here are few tips to help you navigate the psychological aspects of retirement:

Approach it like a new job

Retirement is a difficult time for some people because they have an unrealistic view of what it will be like. Sitting around all day watching TV might be fine for a while, but you need structure in your day to maintain your mental wellbeing.

We tend to get bored without things to stimulate us and this can lead to depression and anxiety. To help prevent this, it can be helpful to approach retirement like a new job, which means actively planning your retirement beforehand.

Write down what activities you'd like to do. These may be things you've always wanted to do but, because of work, you have not been able to. Or perhaps there are aspects of your work that you love and would like to continue to do.

Or maybe you want to give back to your community, or support a cause you're passionate about, by volunteering. All of these are potential activities you can pursue in retirement.

It can help to call these activities 'work' when you're retired, so other people do not assume you're not doing anything with your time. It can also help you to build a new identity and prevent the sense of loss people can feel when their career is no longer a core part of their identity.

Structure your days

Once you've decided on the activities you would like to do, you can start to structure your new 'working' life around them. The benefit of retirement is that you can choose your working hours, so if you do not want to start work until midday then you do not have to.

We tend to get bored without things to stimulate us and this can lead to depression and anxiety. To help prevent this, it can be helpful to approach retirement like a new job, which means actively planning your retirement beforehand.

99

But it's important to identify your working hours and stick to them, so when you're not working you're free to do other things and enjoy them as a reward for the work you've done.

Discuss your plans with family

Speak to your family about your retirement plans, so they do not have unrealistic expectations of how much free time you'll have. For example, if you have grandchildren, you may be asked to look after them more when you retire, so it's important your children know how much spare time you'll have.

You can then build looking after your grandchildren into your day or week. Also, by sharing your plans with your family and developing them together, you're more likely to get their agreement and support.

Build new social network

You may not realise it until you retire, but workplaces offer important social structures. If you enjoyed work and made good friends, you may want to keep up those relationships after you leave. But if you did not enjoy work, you may distance yourself from work colleagues when you retire. If this happens it can lead to social isolation and loneliness, which in turn carry a risk of depression. Pursuing activities that you enjoy can help prevent this.

Most activities require some form of social contact, even if it's only with a few people. So getting involved in an activity makes it easier to form and maintain social connections and build new friendships. We all need social support, and the more we have the better.

Pay attention to your health

It's important to be healthy in retirement so you can enjoy it to the full. This means making time for your health before you retire, such as attending health checks for risk factors for heart and circulatory conditions, like high blood pressure and high cholesterol, and having regular dental, eye and hearing checks.

A healthy lifestyle, such as eating a diet with lots of vegetables, fruits and wholegrains, maintaining a healthy weight, getting enough sleep and exercising regularly, is also essential. Staying active is especially important as it offers social and mental health benefits as well as physical ones.

expressed readiness to provide full security support for the planned peaceful protest by retired officers over pension entitlements, while cautioning against the politicisation and distortion of the agitation.

He described as "disheartening" attempts by certain individuals to manipulate the legitimate concerns of retirees for ulterior motives, warning that such efforts undermine both the government and police leadership.

The protest, billed as "the mother of all peaceful protests," is scheduled for Monday, July 21, 2025, in the Federal Capital Territory and other states of the federation.

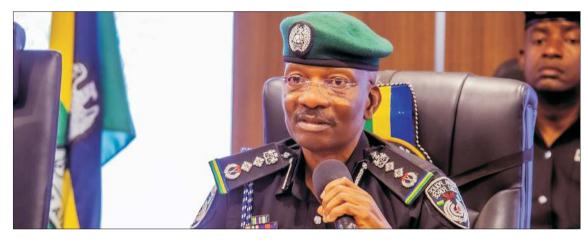

A statement on Sunday by the Force spokesman, Muyiwa Adejobi, said officers have been directed to ensure the protest remains peaceful, while protecting participants from possible hijack by miscreants or political actors.

He said, "It is disheartening to observe how certain actors have chosen to politicise a sensitive welfare issue, weaponising the legitimate grievances of our retired colleagues for ulterior motives.

Markets on Edge:

Rising Oil, Falling Yields, and Gold's Next Big Moves

Oluwole Olawepo

heading into the week. Meanwhile, EUR/USD is navigating a key range between 1.1565 and 1.1720 after breaking its May ascending channel. Adding complexity, XAU/USD (gold) is testing resistance near $3,360–3,370 following oil-driven safe-haven flows.

Quick Recap of Last Week's Market

Last week's trading was shaped by a combination of softening U.S. inflation, mixed global economic data, and shifting central bank narratives.

CPI report came in softer than expected, reinforcing market bets that the Federal Reserve could cut rates before the end of the year. This sent short-term yields lower and pressured the dollar midweek. However, the U.S. Dollar Index (DXY) still closed higher after bouncing off technical support on Friday, as broader risk sentiment remained cautious.

ECB minutes revealed a more dovish tone, with policymakers expressing concern over slowing economic activity. This weighed on the euro, keeping EUR/USD in a tight, indecisive range.

Gold (XAU/USD) saw renewed buying interest as oil prices surged amid rising geopolitical tensions and supply concerns, boosting safe-haven demand. GBP/USD also faced downside pressure after softer UK jobs data. Overall, last week was a transition phase as markets priced in expectations but lacked a definitive breakout. This sets the stage for potential directional moves in the coming days.

Asset to Watch This Week and Why it Matters:

• Gold (XAU/USD)

Gold re-entered the spotlight last week as the combination of dovish central bank expectations, rising geopolitical tensions, and energy market volatility stirs demand for safe-haven assets.

After climbing back above the $3,400 mark last week, XAU/USD is approaching a critical resistance zone around $3,430-$3,450, a region that previously triggered strong rejection in May. The move comes as expectations for a U.S. rate cut in Q4 2025 gather momentum following softer inflation and slowing wage growth. Lower interest rates reduce the opportunity cost of holding gold, typically supporting its price.

On the other side of the equation, global uncertainty remains elevated. Crude oil prices are trading within the $67–$68 range, with WTI holding steady despite geopolitical tensions and supply concerns, driven by supply risks from the Middle East and OPEC output cuts. Historically, sustained oil rallies tend to stoke inflation fears and further boost gold's appeal as an inflation hedge. All eyes are now on whether XAU/USD can sustain its upward momentum or if resistance will hold, setting up a retracement.

Technical Outlook

With gold approaching a high-impact resistance zone at $3,430-$3,450. This week presents two primary trading scenarios both offering strategic opportunities for patient traders.

Gold (XAU/USD) Weekly Chart

Gold (XAU/USD) is approaching a decisive technical zone after staging a strong rebound above $3,200. Price action on the weekly chart shows a clean bullish structure, with higher lows forming above the key support at $3,370. Currently, gold is testing the $3,430–$3,450 resistance band. This zone marked previous weekly rejections in May and June, making it a significant barrier for bulls. A clear break and close above $3,450 could open the door toward the psychological $3,500 round number, which hasn't been reached in recent years.

If price fails at this resistance zone, a retracement toward $3,200 remains likely. Below $3,150, further weakness could drag gold down toward $3,050.

Key Levels to Watch:

- Resistance: $3,500
- Support: $3,200

Trading Strategy & Scenarios

Bullish Scenario:

If gold breaks and closes above $3,450 on the daily timeframe, with a volume spike or strong follow-through candle, we could see a continuation toward $3,490 or even $3,500. In this case:

• Entry Idea: Wait for a breakout + retest of the $3,445-$3,450 zone.

- Target Zones: $3,490 / $3,500
- Risk: Stop loss just below $3,430 to manage a fake-out risk.

Bearish Scenario:

Should gold fail to close above $3,450 and show rejection candles or a bearish engulfing pattern, short-term sellers may step in:

- Entry Idea: Look for signs of exhaustion (e.g., pin bar or inside bar) near resistance.
- Target Zones: $3,395 / $3,370
- Risk: Stop above $3,455-$3,460

Risk Management Tip:

Gold can spike erratically during news or geopolitical shocks. Use wider stops or position-size accordingly, especially when trading on high leverage or synthetic platforms available to Nigerian traders.

Macro Insight / News to Watch

This week's macro calendar is packed with market-moving events that could impact gold (XAU/USD) and the broader risk environment.

Key Events to Watch:

- U.S. S&P Global PMIs (Manufacturing & Services) Forward-looking data on business activity that could sway Fed rate expectations.
- U.S. Crude Oil Inventories A sharp draw or build could affect oil prices and indirectly influence gold via inflation expectations.
- ECB Press Conference & Rate Statement A dovish or hawkish surprise may impact EUR/USD, which can drive dollar flows and affect gold prices.
- Core PCE Price Index (Fed's preferred inflation gauge) One of the most important data points for rate decisions. A soft reading could send gold higher.

Why It Matters:

Gold tends to respond quickly to inflation shifts, risk-off sentiment, and dollar volatility, all of which are tied to the events above.

Psychology Corner

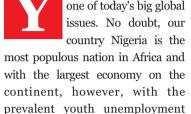

• Patience in High-Impact Zones

In trading, many losses don't come from bad analysis; they come from impatience. This week, with gold hovering near a high-stakes resistance zone, it's crucial to wait for clear confirmation rather than forcing a trade. Let the market show its hand. Discipline beats prediction.

Nigerian Youth:

Gainful Engagement through Social Media

outh unemployment is prevalent youth unemployment issue. At present, Nigeria's population is estimated to be over larger part of its citizenry.

The youth unemployment rate in business and services. Nigeria has reached an alarming record, according to the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS). The youths are acknowledged as the bedrock on which a society is anchored, and they should be a formidable advantage to the economy if well harnessed. At present, hundreds of millions of young people are unable to find a meaningful job that will enable them to support themselves and their families.

More so, graduates from university of people using YouTube, Nairaland, have many difficulties in getting established after school. They are rarely independent, and the once without formal education who should be engaging in vocational training are not getting it as well. Deficient school curricula are also a growing concern and a big issue in the country because it ought to address skill learning and capacity building. Therefore, Nigerian youths need to be equipped for selfemployment to achieve notable job creation and independence.

Entrepreneurship can be a powerful tool to help fight youth unemployment. Youth entrepreneurship offers innovative solutions for economic growth among young people. Entrepreneurship will bring about self-employment, which is one of the significant ways out of this unemployment issue. Therefore, this article looks at one of the strengths youths can leverage on productively, which is social media. Most of the educated Nigerian youths are sociable, energetic and are very internet savvy, therefore for the ready and willing once there is hope in capacity development and entrepreneurship after their formal education. Once skill acquisition and adequate empowerment have been achieved through entrepreneurial development, it can be promoted on social media. Thus, a business idea can be developed, along with the technical skills acquired online.

Believe me, the internet and communication technology (ICT) sector offers huge opportunities for young Nigerians to be future entrepreneurs and small business owners: Social media provides the 200 million, ranking seventh in the opportunity to connect in a very world, with young people forming a personal and meaningful way to customers and promotion of > Social media is growing and now becoming the business hub. Social media will inevitably continue to shape all aspects of business opportunities across industries. Today 2.45 billion monthly active users are on Facebook as of the third quarter of 2019, and more than 100 million people use Instagram every month. LinkedIn has 500 million total LinkedIn users. Twitter has over 330 million monthly active users, when you add up this to the number Instagram, Bet9ja, Pinterest, and other social media platforms. It is easy to conclude that this social media holds ample opportunities for would-be entrepreneurs with growing users. Nigerian Youths can take advantage of social media, which is a fast, inexpensive, and effective way to promote a business and reach out to customers. With the financial constraints of setting up a shop or office and huge advertising cost to draw customers, a prospective entrepreneur might not start-up or scale-up. But with creating a presence on platforms like Facebook and Instagram to get direct sales from customers, the cost is low.

The youths can leverage on this and on their social media networks they already have, as well as get insights from social media to improve their business ideas and market positioning. Social media is super powerful and successful right now because of the adoption rate of technology in the world. According to the co-founder of Alpha Brand Media, and a social media consultant Brent Csutoras he asserts that "Any social media site can be effective for marketing if you take the time to understand what type of content performs well, who the audience is, and get creative about how you can provide your content or product in a way they would appreciate it and accept it. However, understanding the social media audience is important and rewarding. Effective use of social media can bring great opportunities for your business but will require some thought and planning. More youth have smartphones and computers in the home but are not open to social media business prospects. Social media can equally come with some challenges, even for currently established entrepreneurs, because there are so many social media tools and platforms it can be hard to know where to begin. However, with adequate training on social media usage, an entrepreneur should be able to know what he hopes to achieve by using social media. How much time can you devote to social media? What are the most effective platforms to use? What are you trying to achieve for your business? While social media gives you the chance to build brand awareness and customer loyalty, you need to have a clear idea of how to handle negative feedback about your business.

You need to ensure that what you post and how you interact with people presents a professional image to the world. Therefore, with adequate knowledge and capacity building, a business niche can be created and nurtured. It is now easier than ever for willing prospective entrepreneurs to promote new products or services, build brand awareness, personally interact with existing and potential customers, directly target customers with marketing campaigns. Social media provides an easy way for potential customers to express interest in your business and your products.

However, the first point of call is to acquire a skill that could generate steady income and make you independent. Social media can be an effective way to build and promote the skills and tour business reputation once the marketing campaign is right. Be sure your service/business with getting the big impact it deserves on the internet once you can deliver. Your social media plan and strategy should contain a smart mix of engaging family and friends who can recommend your business or services to others. People can talk and positively think about your business, with good posts and service reviews. Social media can provide a platform for customers to talk with each other and talk about their experiences with you and your services. This is called social selling, which can help a great deal on the internet; once you are consistent with staving engaged with your audiences and let them see that you are there for them when they need your service and products goes a long way in achieving results.

Therefore learn how to identify, develop unique skills and develop the business that comes afterward on social media effectively. You can explore some of the current business opportunities that have changed the social media landscape with adequate online research. Good luck!

Building a Career with Walls

Catherine Tamara Ovewole

graduated from the university in 2002, worked for a while, went to FRCN in 2006 where I learnt the art/act of Presentation. I had an opportunity to work with the media after my 2 weeks attachment to a radio house, but didn't, even after I became familiar with some known faces in the industry who encouraged me to give it my best shot.

I went back to work as a marketer where I did lots of presentations until I became an acting unit head where I mastered the act of closing out on sales through good presentation.

I left marketing and found myself as a Customer Experience officer where speaking to and addressing clients' issues is a priority. I have anchored training events, managed other activities relating to my Team in this short while and I have never been afraid to start or not surprised when I-Identify everything I did had an angle of presenting in it.

love to write, speak on podiums/platforms, teach and mentor people whether directly or indirectly, while working on new ideas and innovations for business. Doing this is a true representation of the woman I am and the woman I have become. It is time to build walls.

Walls are solidifiers to building projects, giving it a perfect shape, required look and proper finishing. They are also viewed as barricades and some sort of defence protecting whatever is behind those walls.

Are you accepting whatever life brings your way, are you in the wrong career that leaves you at a spot for so long or are you content with your present position which allows you a monthly wage without securing your future? Then it is time to Build your walls.

D – Decide S – Solidify

Ask yourself the right questions-Are you in the right profession? Does your current career align with your purpose in life, do you struggle to give your best or do you do your job with

So many people are doing the wrong job, working in the wrong places, all in a bid to survive. It is not a surprise that the years keep rolling by without any personal achievement. No growth of any kind. When you should have attained a position of leadership, you are still being led. Lots of people are gambling their lives away because they want to be viewed as the perfect "office boy or girl". Are you fulfilled or trying to be accepted socially by limiting vourself to that job or limiting yourself to that career which does not give a true picture of "You".

Identify the right career path! No matter how far you are gone. Your identity will find you, don't ignore it. No matter how far I move away from my path, my steps are always redirected to a career that promotes my purpose. I find myself constantly given task that are in line with having a media presence and leadership. You can never run away from your shadow, so don't try. Have you ever wondered why you are tagged with responsibilities that soothe your personality? No matter how far you go, your destiny will keep knocking. Don't delay it. Identify that one thing that keeps coming along your path. Your chosen career should have a link to your purpose in life.

Decide to build- One thing most people fear, is to start again. It is never too late to start. Once you discover you are in the wrong career, it is never too late to start afresh. When you begin to do the right thing, only then will your purpose be revealed. I have seen actors, singers, business men, speakers who identified their career path well into their adult age and today their accomplishments goes to show that finding and being in the right career, pays off eventually.

Start building, one brick on another. step by step till you find your purpose

Solidify your walls! To have a career with walls is to be the best at what you do. Be that person that society cannot do without. Be that person that no matter how trends change, you will still be standing. Get certified. Add to your learning process. Add to your accomplishment. When others are failing, let those walls you have built, begin to speak for you.

Let your career lead you to your purpose in life and not take you away from it.

GROWTH INVESTING:

Investors in this kind of investing seek companies that offer strong earnings. Growth stocks represent c o m p a n i e s that have demonstrated better-than-average gains in earnings in recent years and that are expected to continue delivering high levels of profit growth, although there are no guarantees. "Emerging" growth companies are those that have the potential to achieve high earnings growth, but have not established a history of strong earnings growth.

The key characteristics of growth investing are as follows:

Higher priced than broader market

Investors are willing to pay high price-to-earnings multiples with the expectation of selling them at even higher prices as the companies continue to grow

High earnings growth records

While the earnings of some companies may be depressed during periods of slower economic improvement, growth companies may potentially continue to achieve high earnings growth regardless of economic conditions.

More volatile than broader market

The risk in buying a given growth stock is that its lofty price could fall sharply on any negative news about the company.

VALUE INVESTING

Investors in this categoty seek stocks that appear to be undervalued in the marketplace. Value fund managers look for companies that have fallen out of favour but still have good fundamentals. The value group may also include stocks of new companies that have yet to be recognized by investors.

The key characteristics of value investing include:

Lower priced than broader market

The idea behind value investing is that stocks of good companies will bounce back in time if and when the true value is recognized by other investors.

Priced below similar companies in industry

Many value investors believe that a majority of value stocks are created due to investors' While the earnings of some companies may be depressed during periods of slower economic improvement, overreacting to recent company problems, such as disappointing earnings, negative publicity or legal problems, all of which may raise doubts about the company's long-term prospects.

Carry somewhat less risk than broader market

However, as they take time to turn around, value stocks may be more suited to longer term investors and may carry more risk of price fluctuation than growth stocks.

INVESTMENT RISKS AN INVESTOR SHOULD KNOW

Investing your money and dealing with the associated risks is a great challenge that every investor must accept in order to reap higher returns. In order to key out and minimize risks, it is vital to know the types of risks applicable to investments.

Market Risk

This risk is associated with the movement in the prices of stock that commonly affects the market as a whole. There are many factors that cause market fluctuation, and natural calamity is one of them. Other factors are the phase of the market bull or bear. The rising and falling prices of the stocks and bonds determine profit and loss of the investors. If the market is in its bear phase, the downside risk is comparatively low and on the contrary if it is in bull phase the downside risk is more as the market can crash anytime.

Socio Political Risk

Change in government policy, political unrest, international issues (war), elections and change of government are some of the important elements that affect market stability. This instability may impose a huge risk on money and investment.

Business Risk

The market value of shares depends on the performance of that stock in the market. If the investor have invested in the company that unfortunately isn't doing well, the market value of that investment will rapidly go down. When they invest in any company or enterprise, there are chances they may suffer loss or face bankruptcy. The risk associated with such investments may be little or in some cases very high. One common way to avoid such risks is to create a diversified portfolio.

taking medications in higher doses than recommended. Or they might mix different drugs without knowing how they interact with each other, that's a recipe for disaster. For instance, combining certain pain relievers with alcohol can lead to severe liver damage, It's scary to think about, isn't it? Dependency is another thing. Self-medicating can lead to a cycle where you feel like you need to take that medication more often. You might start relying on it to cope with stress or anxiety. Before you know it, what was once a comes with this practice. It's casual remedy turns into something you can't live without. That's not a healthy place to be.

Now, let's take a step back and think about the bigger picture. When you self medicate, you're not addressing the root cause of the problem. Instead, you might be masking symptoms, and that can lead to ignoring important health signals your body is trying to send you. It's like putting a band-aid on a bigger wound.

Sooner or later, that wound needs proper care.

There's also the risk of contributing to a larger public health issue. Antibiotics, for example, everyone's heard of them, and many people think they're a go-to for all sorts of infections. But here's the catch, using antibiotics when they're not necessary can lead to antibiotic resistance. This is a huge problem, as it can make bacterial infections harder to treat. It's a classic case of 'short-term gain, long-term pain.' So, what's the solution? Well, it's pretty straightforward actually. If you're feeling unwell or have a health concern, it's always best to talk to a healthcare professional. They can provide you with the right guidance and treatment. Plus, it's a good practice to educate yourself about your health and the medications you might be considering. Knowledge is power after all.

In conclusion, while selfmedication might seem like an easy fix, it's filled with dangers that can lead to more harm than good. Misdiagnosis, drug interactions, dependency, side effects, and masking symptoms are just a few of the dangers that worth taking the time to consult with a professional and get the right advice. Always remember that your health is too precious to gamble with.

So the next time you think about reaching for that over-the-counter remedy or a leftover prescription, pause for a moment. Is it really worth the risk? Wouldn't it be better to consult with a doctor who can provide tailored advice and help you weigh the risks versus benefits?
